By Appointment.

New Place Museum, or as it is sometimes known, Nash's House, is situated next to the plot of ground on which Shakespeare erected a house (New Place) and laid out grounds, both, however, being destroyed in 1753 by the then Vicar of Frodsham. Nash's House was the property of Thomas Nash, the husband of the poet's grand-daughter; it was converted into a Museum in 1861.
